Comment or Question:

Three points:

- 1 We're being told to conserve, drive less and use mass transit. To make more lanes for cars would encourage just the opposite.

- 2 "Build it and they will come". Just like all the freeway expansions, any new auto lanes would just fill up and we'd be right back where we started. Someone once said, "You can't build your way out of congestion."

- 3 Four Billion dollars is just too much right now (and probably in the future as will). The US economy is being ruined by too much debt. Would this be the last straw to break it?
