Would a commuter train from Vancouver to Portland running during rush hours be possible on the existing Amtrack line? Wasn't a commuter train implemented during the two-week partial closure of the I-5 Bridge in 2001 or 2000?

It seems lots of money could be saved by using commuter trains that would end up in Portland's Union Station with upcoming easy connections to light rail and bus service.

Just a suggestion to consider.

Thank you.
