Hi,

I am a commuter that works in Portland, and live in Vancouver. I work for a good company, Time Warner Telecom with excellent benefits and a great place to work. It is worth the hassle of commuting, which I currently do riding CTran every day.

Infact, there are 29 people out of 50 employees that work in my office all commuting from Vancouver.

I am in total support of a Max line included in the bridge plans to Vancouver with the transit center at Clark College. I would prefer to see it ride along the I-5 corridor as I think going DT Vancouver would be slower with more stops. I think, the faster the service, more people will see it as very easy and convenient way to travel. If they can drive their own car and get somewhere faster, people will use it less.

With gas prices going up all the time, people everywhere need to realize that mass transit is the only way for the future.

thank you, Jenny
