is needed now are three discretely separated Columbia River Crossings into Oregon. Let the CRC start thinking outside the box.

Thank you.

HAL DENGERINK: Thank you, Bob.

Okay.

SPEAKER: I did participate early in this process and early in this process I did urge the consideration of a heavy rail or a rail alternative that would be truly between communities and not a street car as we are being left with.

The prospect of a 45-minute-plus commute just getting -- once you get over the bridge on the existing street car is not very -- it is not a positive thing. We really needed another alternative with this type of light rail. It's not very attractive.

But from the same point of view, if we were to look at our overall commitment as a community to transportation and if we were to look at it in the bigger picture of things, I really believe that the Portland and the Urban Planners really do have the right thing in mind.

We may think that the people from Metro were crazy and everything, coming in late and we may not like their opinions, but some of the things said really did make sense.

The idea of the flexible tolling, if we really look at modifying our behaviors, really does make sense. We are not going to, through this, alleviate the stress that is already been put upon neighborhoods that are directly adjacent to the I-5 corridor.

Those neighborhoods, from all the alternatives that I could see, will continue to be poisoned with the effluent of a transportation corridor. I do not see substantial mitigation being rendered to them, and I think that's wrong. You know, it is has been mentioned again and again that we need to do that, but it's wrong.

Anthropologists -- if you look at our terrific marriage with the car -- over 00077 1 here it seems that we are even more married to the car than the Portland area. 3 We are throwbacks. I don't know what's 4 wrong with us here. We are provincial. 5 We do not get it, and the people in Portland seem to have got it. And we've 7 got to realize that we are going to have 8 to have some sort of dependance upon 9 communal transportation. 10 Thank you. 11 HAL DENGERINK: Thank you. Karen. 12 KAREN AXELL: My name is Karen 13 Axell. I live on East 29th Street in 14 Vancouver. I am against any form of light 15 rail and I did testify to that also six to 16 seven years ago at the I-5 transportation 17 project and 13 years ago when we all in 18 Clark County voted against light rail. 19 It is too expensive. There are no 20 clear funding options projected. It does 21 not reduce congestion. Figures show that 22 less than one percent shift from cars to 23 light rail the per rider cost is too high.

They show that -- it seems to be
