Comment:

My first choice would be to leave well enough alone, or to build another bridge at some other location across Lake Washington. Because I know that neither of these options would be seriously considered, then I think the only feasible alternative would be the Pacific Interchange plan. I realize that many of the surrounding neighborhoods are opposed to this because of the perceived impact that it would have on their neighborhoods. If indeed there would be an impact, I think it is time that some other neighborhoods bear the brunt of 520. Just because Montlake has been singled out in the past as the neighborhood that should have the most traffic funneled through it, I believe this is the time to change that concept.
